Australian National Flag Day 2020

I am pleased to support Australian National Flag Day 2020, marking 119 years since the national flag was first flown.

It is a time to reflect on all that has been achieved under the Australian flag and the society we have built together based on opportunity, fairness and inclusion.

The flag's Commonwealth Star, representing the eight states and territories of the Federation, has special significance this year as we respond to the COVID-19 pandemic together.

I thank the Australian National Flag Association for the opportunity to share in this occasion and encourage households, businesses, schools and local authorities across NSW to fly the Australian flag with pride on 3 September.
